HOOPER & ASHLEY.

While services were being conducted at Epiphany church last Saturday night by Rev. Tisdell, the church roof caught fire, and it was all the people could do to save the building. It took 4,000 shingles to patch the hole burned in the roof.

It's wonderful the immense business Kahn's Trade Palace does. It seems that everybody goes to him to buy good goods for little money. He can and will do everybody for the simple reason that he keeps goods to suit everybody's pocket-book.

Messrs. Henry Griffin, T. J. Smith, Commodore Westfield, A. L. Morton, and numerous other gentlemen, are looking toward Mr. Tisdell and offering to serve the city in his place as Postmaster here. The time for appointment is not a long way off and of course nobody knows who will win.

Joe Alford was tried for a breach of the peace before his honor Judge John P. Morton Monday. The jury returned a verdict of guilty and fixed his punishment at $50 fine and 30 days in the county jail. There are two other cases pending against him, one for resisting an officer and the other for carrying concealed a deadly weapon.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Rev. Walter Wallace, D.D., of Springfield, Missouri, to Miss Nellie E. Duncan, which will occur at the First Presbyterian church at McHenry at 7:30 p. m., November 26th, 1893.

Immediately after the contracting parties and the invited guests will repair to Mrs. Mary A. Dana's, the mother of the bride, where a bountiful reception will be tendered them.

RATIFY?

Well, We Did, if You Please

The Biggest Demonstration Ever Seen in Hartford.

Everybody Delighted and Nobody Hurt in Body or Feelings.

That a kind Providence has chosen the lines for Democracy was proved more apparent than on Friday evening when the gay little city of Hartford extended her arms to the political host that ever assembled on Ohio county soil.

The rain which fell on Thursday left everything so damp that there was little chance of fire, and lights shone everywhere. The evening was just such weather as the Democrats would have wished.

"The wind blew a gale all day, but at last it had died away."

And now, since they were together for the first time, did the stars shine with a brighter radiance. By five o'clock, the crowd was already in the city streets. Expensive decorations adorned every business house and almost every dwelling. Variegated lights shone from every window and gay colored lanterns adorned every street.

At 5:30 o'clock a great throng composed of the sturdy Democrats from Hartford followed a beautiful band of drummers and brass bands.

They made a circuit of the principal streets and were everywhere admired as a magnificent body of men. Shortly after dark the great procession composed of Democrats from all over the county and headed by that splendid body of musicians, the Hartford Cornet Band, formed in Market Street and took the line of march, which embraced all the principal streets.

Never before was such a scene witnessed here as the streets presented during the formation of the line. Everywhere the fire flashed from the beautiful illumination, and fireworks which the committee had arranged. Bombs after bombs rent the air, while the myriads of tin horns added to the din.

Amid this clatter of noises and the fluttering of flags and the hurrahs of the delighted multitude the line of march was taken up. The line was long and had been nearly traversed when the magnificent procession from Beaver Dam appeared. They had been delayed and just arrived in time to arrange the programme where that arranged by the Central Club had terminated, and royally did they execute their part of it. Headed by gayly decorated carriages carrying a cavalcade of young ladies and little girls dressed in fanciful costumes, they came upon the scene like a view from fairy land.

Behind the cavalcade, long lines of young gentlemen and ladies on horseback, the gentlemen bearing torches and the ladies flags. The bright colors of the ladies' costumes, if anything could enhance the beauty of the daughters of which Beaver Dam has so many.

From my residence in Hartford, last Friday night, a black horse, 15 hands high, 10 years old, cropped foretop. Any information leading to his recovery will be liberally rewarded.

up the fine points of his pay stood with beating and he galloped gracefully into the midst of the procession.

Bartford brought her own torches and with fighting cocks on their tails they kept up their reputation for always being "in" on Democratic occasions.

Dr. A. B. Baint's office, Griffin's, Fair Bank, the Henshaw office, the Bank, H. P. Taylor's office and Guffy & Rinco's office were the most brilliantly lighted houses on the parade.

Col. James W. Ford was a boy again, and to watch the sparkle of his eye as at the head of his column he carried his flag and "baldie" with the boys was enough to drive away the blues for a lifetime.

The women of the good county of Ohio had not children to their duty nor their interest. They are, most of them, Democrats and at the proper time and Friday night was such a time they are not averse to showing which side they are on.

Rockport was here, Rosine was here, Cromwell, Ashville and Mason were here. Fairer, everywhere was here and some old man was heard to remark, "If all these folks are Democrats, there'll be another Republican President for a hundred years."

Nothing could be more charming than that Beaver Dam delegation. If anyone Charles Barrett took all the way here to defeat to Beaver Dam fight in the midst of that night of light and beauty and kept on saying "nothing," then he deserves to die a miserable slave.

Among the most splendid illuminations of private homes were those of Dr. J. E. Pondexter, J. W. Ford, J. P. Sander, S. K. Cox, A. L. Morton, J. A. Thomas, Rowan Holbrook, J. E. Howe and E. D. Walker. Many of these homes were perfect visions of beauty which they were worth a long ride to see.

Nobody took more genuine interest in the evening's success or contributed more to it than Mr. John Ware and Dr. John Mitchell, of Beaver Dam. Each took the trouble faithfully for the success of Democracy at the recent election and they earned the great pleasure which that celebration of that victory brought to them.

It was Major John C. Riley now, for it was to the persistent efforts and attentions of the Major that the band of noble boys with their tin horns and gay transparencies owed their perfect organization and equipment, and there was no boy in the ranks, happy as they all were, who more enjoyed the parade than the boys of the ranks.

Col. W. H. Moore, of the committee of arrangement, put in a week looking after the details of the parade and the illuminations, and at his efforts assisted by Messrs. H. P. Taylor, Steve May, J. C. Riley, Rowan Holbrook, J. W. Ford and the other members of the committee, a magnificent and splendid success of the fireworks and illuminations.

By her horse becoming frightened, one plucky girl from Beaver Dam was thrown to the ground in the midst of the parade. She did not go through the needless formalities of fainting and being carried out in the arms of her attendant, but she scrambled to her feet and re-arranged her dress and was soon in her place in the line again. The Henshaw girls, looking toward those Beaver Dam girls, and we venture to predict that before Frankie and Ruth leave the White House, many of them will be looking upon those Democratic girls which can never do too much honor.

Chairman Holbrook read the following: "The correspondence, which is self explanatory."

HARTFORD, CT., Nov. 25, 1893. Mr. H. P. Taylor, Secretary of the Hartford, Ct. Young Men's Association, Hartford, Ct.

Yours truly, H. H. HOSKINS.
